Young Leaders' Program (Healthcare Administration)
Curriculum Guidelines

I Overview

1. The curriculum would aim to explain how modern Japan improved national living standards at a comparatively lower cost within the last half century by introducing the concept of Western methodology and adjusting it to Japanese culture and social system, and how healthcare administration works in the practical world. Using this knowledge, the courses pursue the question of what is the most desirable method of resolving the respective problems concerning healthcare administration for the country concerned.
2. Each subject which is conducted in the form of comparative study covers various aspects of healthcare administration so that every student can apply what he/she has acquired at this program to the real situation of each country, factoring in the differences of economic, social, and environmental background of respective student.
3. Going beyond instruction about skills and knowledge, the curriculum will seek to cultivate students' own ideas to identify problems and develop the ability for finding solutions.
4. The curriculum aims to create human networks and enhance the understanding about Japan, through interaction with leading figures engaging in healthcare administration and other fields.
5. Great emphasis is placed on writing Master's Thesis in the curriculum. Students are needed to make a presentation of Master's Thesis at the "Research Presentation on Master's Thesis". Besides writing Master's Thesis in English, students are encouraged to submit the manuscript of their Master's Thesis to an international journal in English. By implementing these activities, the curriculum aims to help students obtain what is necessary for writing publishable papers and conducting presentations about their papers.

II Participants

The course is directed to administrators with about 2 years work experience in governmental medical and welfare organizations, who are expected to play the role of future national leaders in developing countries. All the classes will be in English, so it is necessary to have a good command of the language. The selection will be based on an overall evaluation of work experience, IELTS or TOEFL score, the quality of the essay, Proposed subject and background of Master's Thesis, a recommendation from a superior and an interview.
